Thursday, November 18, 2010, 7 pm
Marcia E. Vetrocq
critic, art historian, editor

MARCIA E. VETROCQ is a critic, art historian, and the editor of Art in America magazine. Prior to joining the staff of Art in America in 1998, she was, for 13 years, a professor of art history at the University of New Orleans and the founding coordinator of the visual arts section of UNO's graduate program in arts administration. She is the author of numerous essays on modern and contemporary art, and has contributed to catalogues at museums from New York's Guggenheim to the Musée Maillol in Paris and the Tokyo City Art Gallery. She holds a PhD in art history from Stanford University, and is a recipient of the Wolfsonian Foundation Senior Fellowship (for research in architecture and design) and the Heiskell Visiting Critic Fellowship of the American Academy in Rome.
