The applications listed to the right are some of the more popular Federal-wide resources that can be found on GPO Access. Visit www.gpoaccess.gov for a complete list

In addition to its full-text databases, GPO Access acts as a portal to information located throughout Federal Government Web sites and Federal depository libraries located nationwide. Use the various search and browse tools to:

1. Find Federal publications in print and electronic formats;

2. Locate Federal depository libraries that are likely to include that publication in their collection;

3. Locate publications available for purchase from the Superintendent of Documents.

Catalog of U.S. Government Publications

http://catalog.gpo.gov

Find print and electronic Government information products created by Federal agencies. Use it to link to Federal agency online resources, identity materials distributed to Federal depository libraries, and locate publications available for sale from the Superintendent of Documents.

Search the Federal Government

http://www.gpoaccess.gov/advancedsearch.html

Locate information on GPO Access and throughout the Federal Government using a search index provided by USA.gov. Options include the ability to search for information throughout the Federal Government or restrict searches to only GPO Access resources.

Depository Library in your Area

http://www.gpoaccess.gov/libraries.html

Locate a Federal depository library in your area. These libraries are located throughout the United States and provide access to Federal information both in print and electronic formats. Expert library staff are available to assist users at these depository libraries.

Browse Topics

http://www.browsetopics.gov

Browse Topics is your pathway to Federal Web sites. Professional librarians from the Federal depository library community have created a browseable list of Federal Web sites based off broad subject areas. Choose a category and then click on a listing to read a detailed description of the services provided by a site. Brought to you in partnership with Oklahoma State University (OSU).

Federal Agency Internet Sites

http://www.gpoaccess.gov/agencies.html

Search or browse for Federal Web sites based on the Government stucture found in the U.S. Government Manual. Agencies are divided into six categories: executive; judicial; legislative; independent; boards, commissions, and committees; and quasi-official.
